Research Methods in Private Law: A Comparative Discussion

Tuesday 24 January 2017, 16.00-18.00,
The Faculty of Law, “Tryckeriet”, The conference room, 4th floor

On January 24th 2017 at 16.00 – 18.00 (sharp) The Centre for Business Law at Lund University invites you to a workshop, which will be held in English, with Professor Andrew Robertson, Melbourne Law School. The workshop will take place in the conference room at the 4th floor in “Tryckeriet”.

Professor Robertson is an internationally leading researcher in the fields of civil law and commercial law, who has previously been a visiting Professor at institutions such as the University of British Columbia and the National University of Singapore. His research covers the law of obligations, contract law and tort law, as well as theoretical and comparative analyses. Andrew Robertson is also the initiator and organizer of the Obligations Conferences series, whose 9th edition will take place at the Melbourne Law School in July 2018 on the theme of “Form and Substance in the Law of Obligations”.

At the workshop Professor Robertson will introduce the topic by discussing the research methods of common law scholars working on the law of obligations. After the introduction he, together with Professor Rolf Dotevall (Gothenburg University) and Professor Per Samuelsson (Lund University), will form a panel and there will be a plenary discussion of broader questions concerning research methodologies in private law.

The workshop is free to attend, but registration is required. Please register as soon as possible, however no later than 16 January 2017, by e-mailing mattias.liljeback@jur.lu.se

Dinner will be served after the workshop

With kind regards,
